To the Open Forum Editor:

History will record the name of Mr. Dulles as one of the great secretaries of state of this country.

His most recent achievement of bringing together France and Germany in an accord is worthy of the acclaim it has received. It is only one of many.

He has been able to do these things because of his natural ability and great experience covering two world wars. It was indeed fortunate that the president of the United States happened to be a man who was understood and respected by the countries of Europe. Another great help was information received from the Central Intelligence Agency, which is headed by Mr. Dulles' brother, Allen, who had had tremendous experience coupled with natural ability. During the last world war, he was in control of our intelligence in Switzerland.

Mr. Dulles has the ability to use organizations like the CIA and others to his advantage. He has the greatness to give credit to those who deserve it and his career as secretary of state will make its mark in U. S. history.
